On behalf of the editorial team and reviewers, the Editor-in-Chief has the great pleasure of presenting the inaugural issue of the Souf Journal of Engineering and Sustainable Chemistry (SJESC) to the global research community. This journal is dedicated especially to those seeking to disseminate their innovative work and to researchers who wish to stay abreast of the latest advancements in their fields.

SJESC is committed to providing a platform for scholars worldwide to publish their high-quality scientific research without any publication fees. It was established to address the growing need for specialized, accessible scholarly outlets in the regions of engineering and sustainable chemistry, thereby offering a dedicated venue for both local and international researchers. Every submission to SJESC will be rigorously evaluated by a carefully selected panel of experts from reputable universities and institutions around the world. We promise a fast, reliable, and transparent peer-review process, aligned with the quality standards of leading international journals. Furthermore, we are committed to providing a preliminary response whether acceptance or rejection within two weeks of submission.

The journal is supported by an experienced and diverse editorial board and reviewers specializing in various fields of engineering, science, and sustainable chemistry. They provide constructive and valuable feedback to help authors enhance their work and meet the publication criteria of SJESC.

The success of SJESC relies on the dedication of its editorial board members, the rigor of its reviewers, and the contributions of its authors. We are confident that the high-quality manuscripts featured in this first issue will inspire researchers worldwide to choose SJESC as a trusted outlet for their future submissions.

Finally, we extend our sincere gratitude to all editorial board members and reviewers who have invested considerable effort and expertise to uphold the quality and integrity of our journal.
